Greening Park Infrastructure

EPA has produced a guide titled, Green Infrastructure in Parks: A Guide to Collaboration, Funding, and Community Engagement, to encourage partnerships between park agencies and stormwater agencies to promote the use of green infrastructure on park lands. Green infrastructure can help to maximize the environmental, economic, and social benefits of parks. By building strong partnerships, agencies can improve park lands and access to parks, better manage stormwater, increase community resiliency to shifting weather patterns, and provide funding to implement and maintain park enhancements that benefit the community. Case studies are included to illustrate the approaches presented in the guide. These real-life examples portray how partnerships between municipal stormwater agencies and parks departments have improved recreational resources in the community, enhanced environmental protection, and reduced risks and burdens.

Tips for the Environment:

- 1. Leaf them Alone, Mulch or Compost- With our long warm fall, many leaves are still falling. Leaves are rich in carbon, which will balance greens in your compost pile like food scraps and grass clippings. Compost can be used as a mulch or mixed into the garden soil. Leaves will also help reduce some of the excess water in your compost bin which is released as the food breaks down. One of the best ways to fix this is to add leaves every time you add food scraps. Collect and store leaves in the fall, then use them throughout the rest of the year.
- 2. F qpo'Howj 'Y k'gu- Baby wipes, even the ones advertised as "flushable", are among the most common objects that clog pipes and jam pumps at sewage treatment plants as well as many home toilets. We all pay for the costs associated with sewer infrastructure. Use washable cloth wipes instead or dispose of wipes with household trash. Plant-based wipes that are free of dyes and perfumes are available as greener options.
